BALSAMO

Species: BALSAMO

Scientific Name: Myroxylon balsamum

Common Names: Mahogany (Santos), Cabriuva Vermelha, Cedro Chino, Chirraca, Estoraque, Incienso, Nabal, Navo, Palo de Balsamo, Quina, Sandalo, Tache, Tolu

Janka Rating: 2160

Specific Gravity: 0.77

Typical Trunk Diameter: 2-3'

Appearance: Is a red/orange wood with medium-fine grain. The very fine and even texture of this well-known and popular hardwood, along with its striped figuring, complements the attractive dark reddish brown color of mahogany wood flooring. The white sapwood is sharply demarcated from the heartwood. The grain of mahogany is typically interlocked, and the surface can have a medium to high luster.

Special Characteristics: Balsamo is known for its strength and beauty, and it has outstanding durability. One of the hardest and most durable wood flooring species. It is over two hundred percent harder than Douglas fir, is roughly fifty-one percent harder than hard maple and approaches ninety-four percent of Brazilian cherry's ranking of 2350.

Uses: Typically found in wood flooring, turnery, interior trim, and furniture. The pleasantly aromatic balsamo is often used as an ingredient in some perfumes. Also used in Flooring, countertops, furnishings, stair nosings, ship building, railroad ties and heavy construction.

Working Properties: Because of its hardness, which can make sawing and machining difficult, carbide tooling is recommended. It sands beautifully to a high natural polish, however, and has good holding ability.

Underwater Logging Panama: Beere Timber Company is excited to announce we now have container loads of rare live edge slabs of hardwood imported from Panama. Whether you're looking for material for your next deck or you're looking for a unique one of a kind live edge slab for a table top, these amazing pieces of ancient hardwood were preserved in the underwater jungles of Panama since 1979 before a historical eco joint venture between Coast Eco Timber and the 14 comarcas of the Kuna Madugandi Tribe sustainably harvested these beautiful species and landed them here at Beere Timber.
